

To Whom It May Concern:

I joined the College Works Painting program last year, as a senior Business Economics major at UCI, in hopes of gaining real-world business experience and in search of personal growth. Both were gained way beyond my initial hopes and expectations of the program. I learned so much about sales, marketing, managing my time, and managing employees. I developed many new relationships, with other interns, and even with some clients. I would like to thank my District Manager, Mike Malchicoff, who personally ensured my success, for holding me accountable every step of the way, and teaching me not only what it takes to be successful in business, but also life in general. I would like to thank CWP for working so hard to instill values such as integrity, leadership, honesty, passion and drive, and balance—values that go beyond the program, beyond business, into my every day life. This last year, more than any other, has shaped my character and instilled in me a vision of a bright and successful future for myself.
