

To Whom It May Concern:

I was a branch manager of College Works Painting from winter of 2006 through summer of 2007. It was a challenging experience in the sense that it required me to step out of my comfort zone and attempt tasks that were difficult. It is especially suitable for individuals who are organized and determined. For those who lack in either, by the end of the internship, he or she will develop these traits. While all interns enter the program with confidence, due to the challenging nature of the tasks, the confidence level will eventually fluctuate. However, those who complete the program earn not only money, but also invaluable business experience.

Personally, I faced many difficulties in this program; I did not have fluent communication skills or painting experience. However, I was able to persevere and finish the program hitting 30,000 in sales. My ultimate reward was not in the amount I earned, but in the confidence that I gained through overcoming my disadvantages. Without question, College Works Painting was one of the toughest experiences that I've had. Yet through it, I developed mental toughness and determination.

I strongly recommend College Works Painting to individuals who are organized, determined, and are looking for a challenge.
