CollegeWorks Internship Experience

My internship experience with Collegeworks Painting (CWP) was one of the most challenging yet rewarding activities I have ever involved myself with. I had a great time working with clients, getting exposed to new ideas and people, being treated like a big-time executive by the company, going out on Friday-Payroll events, and being the “boss” of my own business at age Twenty-One. How many people your age can say that ?

Upon completion of my internship at CWP, I looked back to see how I had changed from day one. Before I started working for CWP I was your average, run-of-the mill college student, with not a whole lot to show for myself on paper. I had no idea what I wanted to do upon graduation, and to be honest, I was somewhat lazy. This internship changed all that and helped me to prepare for life in the real world. I learned so many new skills that I still use to this very day, and am very appreciative of all that CWP has helped me to accomplish. Had I not completed their internship, I would not, without a doubt in my mind, be where I am today.

I am currently a senior at UConn-Storrs, and am now involved with an internship through the School of Business. I had to compete against 42 other intern-potentials for a spot in a company which only hired eight students. The biggest part of my resume which definitely set me apart from other interns was the CWP Experience. I had gained a ton of confidence after doing so many “estimates,” which are basically interviews, that when it came down to interviewing for a big company I had absolutely no doubts in my mind that I would ace it. Not only did CWP help me with my confidence and communication skills, but my resume had more than “Host at TGIF,” or a construction job I had in high school (which I tried to stretch in to something like “construction associate for client relations” so my resume would sound more professional). So to make a long story short, I received the internship position at a Big-4 Accounting firm over many other students who applied, and it was largely due to CWP’s internship.

To anyone who is considering partaking in CWP’s once-in-a-lifetime offer, I honestly encourage you to participate. If you never do anything challenging then you will be another average college student, and companies today are looking for anything-but average hires. There is a high demand to set yourself apart from others in any way possible. Showing that you can handle this internship is a really great way to do just that, as CWP's experience encompasses so many scenario's and situations that you will face in businesses everywhere that you really can not go wrong. Every business has clients and client management, as well as managers (who by the way make more money than just employees). If you show that you can go outside of your comfort zone and try something new, you will already be that much further ahead than the rest of your classmates.

I want to say Thanks again to CollegeWorks Painting. They provided me with my first real shot at doing something worth-while, and without that opportunity I would definitely not be where I am today. Good luck to all the future interns!
