

TO whom it may concern:

My name is Mark Peters. I am a double major here at The Fox School of Business, in Entrepreneurship and Marketing. I have been able to maintain a 3.2 GPA, on top of being a part of three Student Professional Organizations (Students for Responsible Business, Entrepreneurial Student Association, and American Marketing Association), Working as a Webmaster for Temple University, and pursuing my own personal goals within the entrepreneurial world.

Last year I had the opportunity to be a part of an amazing internship with National Services Group. I was able to run my very own painting business for three quarters of the year. Learning the basics of running a business was easy with the leadership the company provided for me, and I myself grew a great deal not only as a businessman, but a person, throughout that year. I learned how to be more organized, to deal with stress, and to pursue any dreams I have because of the positive support from the company.

I was very successful with my business – running nearly a seventy-two thousand dollar business – as a nineteen year old in the industry. This helped to further my development of my resume, and as stated above, the development of my character through time.

The company allows you to balance school work and business work at the same time, with help from its dedicated personnel that work hand in hand with branch managers on their way to success in the company.

I highly recommend this program to other business students within the Fox school because of its ability to create leaders for the business world of tomorrow. Any student, whether a part of the school or not, that has the opportunity to partake in the internship should do so.

Regards,

Mark Peters
