

To whom it may concern,

As a college graduate, I have had some time to think about my experiences in college. The dorm life was amazing, and sophomore and junior year could not have been more fun. The school work would come and go, friends would always be around and parties would be nightly. Although all these things sound great, one thing was missing in my life, direction.

After successfully completing the College Works Internship I feel like I have completed something in my life. I achieved my Bachelors degree and find myself comparing my lessons from school with real lessons I have learned through this internship. Often times when I was sitting with a client and we were discussing school, I tell them how this internship has taught me more than I learned in all four years of school. It is hands on, and the issues are real. Being able to say confidently that I ran my own business and have reference letters to prove it feels exceptional.

Now, as a graduate student, I find myself explaining what I accomplished in my classes. I tell everyone about how I managed my own company and feel extremely comfortable being on the spot. I have always been a friendly person, but now I also feel confident in my abilities. College Works has helped me turn into the person I have been trying to find throughout my whole college experience
